NEWHALL, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1924

NUMBER 89

"For Each Other--Not Against Each Other."

Can We As A Community Let Our Church Stand Unfinished?

The following questions are asked by many of the Newhall people: "When is the new church going to be finished, and why don't they go along faster?" "Do you think they have any funds to put men at work?" "Will it be completed before winter?"

The new church has gone along very slowly up to the present time. Now we are at a standstill, not because the members of the building committee are not willing that it should go speedily to completion, but here is the fault: Many of the members have not contributed toward this building. They have been sitting idly asking the above questions. Those who have made substantial contributions find no reason to ask such questions. They speak like this: "Why don't the ones who haven't contributed come to the front now and help along? The willing ones have done their share long ago. It's their money that has paid for the building up to date. You who haven't done anything, please step forward and help a little."

The writer does not know who has or who hasn't helped to hurry the building along but she does know that there are a number in town who have not paid their pledges as yet. If they had we would go ahead much faster. Don't let us stand idly by and let others do what we should do ourselves. It's a great mission to help erect and also a credit to our community. You surely must realize that this is a part of the Lord's work, and not a pastime.

I am thinking of the boys and girls of our community (because I am one of them), and we are blessed with many. Are they going to wade thru the mud this winter to the little old church in the rear, only to catch cold, and maybe pass beyond?

You can see that we are not building foolishly, but doing a good work for the children so they can study the gospel in a comfortable place where they are not crowded like cattle.

The building finances are exhausted now and the building cannot be completed unless those who haven't already done something come to our rescue.

Don't let our brothers do it all but let us wake up and do our share and the question about going ahead

"FORGET IT"

"If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,
A leader of men, marching fearless and proud
And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a very good plan to forget it."

If you know of a skeleton hidden away
In a closet, and guarded and kept from the day
In the dark, and whose showing, whose sudden display
Would cause grief and sorrow and lifelong dismay
It's a very good plan to forget it."

If you know of a thing that would darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That would wipe out a smile, or the least bit annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,
It's a very good plan to forget it."

Presbyterian Church Notes

The pastor's subject Sunday morning will be "Christianity."

"The Opening Period of Christ's Ministry," a review, is the Sunday school lesson. Golden text is John 3-16.

The C E lesson and short talks at 7:30. Song service.

Mrs. Dill led Sunday evening. She is a splendid leader, and was well supported by the congregation. Among those present from the Houby community were Mr and Mrs. Bellknapp and daughter and Mr and Mrs. Palmer.

Rev. W. H. Evans was in Wilmington Sunday, where he assisted in the funeral of the late Mrs. Louise Scoville. She was 84 years old and contributed her services during three wars. During the World War she was confined to a wheel chair but kept busy the entire time knitting for the boys in camps and "over yo. der."

Brother Evans occupied his old pulpit in the Wilmington church, Sunday morning. He found 385 attending Sunday school. 17 years ago the attendance was 18.

Mr. Wilkie and Mr. Needham conducted the morning service.

so slowly on the new church will be eliminated.

Come on old and middle aged, young people, and little ones.

Let us all give a portion of that which the Lord has given us, to the finishing of the church and no doubt we will be happy to know that we at least had a small part in this wonderful work.

This article is an appeal to the people of Newhall, not meant to scold or compel anyone, as you are privileged to exercise your free will.

MARION FREW,

CARD OF THANKS

Words cannot express my appreciation of the kindness and sympathy shown me from his and my dear friends at the time of my dear husband's passing. I wish to thank the public in general for the many loyal expressions and tributes shown him.

Mrs. ED BROWN.

Saugus Sayings

The Catholic ladies of Saugus and Newhall vicinities will give a chicken dinner and dance at Hap-a-Lan Hall Saturday evening Oct. 11, at 6 p. m. You may eat and dance to your heart's desire.

The Saugus Community Club will stage its first benefit Saturday Sept. 27 at 2 p. m. in Penhorwood's confectionery, with a cooked food sale. There will be chillibans, spaghetti, apple and pumpkin pie, home made bread, meat and everything for the Sunday menu. Come all to our first community affair. We will appreciate your patronage. Thank you.

Many Saugus people attended the Ruiz-DeRaggio wedding at S. Fernando Saturday. The wedding supper was served at 6 p. m. in the grape arbor at the home of the bride in San Francisco Canyon. Dancing continued until a late hour. An old-fashioned barbecue followed Sunday. Mr and Mrs. DeRaggio will spend their honeymoon in San Francisco.

The Power Situation

Cities and towns of Southern California are to be put on probation by Power Supervisor H. G. Butler.

A new order has been issued by that official permitting a resumption of the wonted outdoor lighting for business houses, but it has "a string on it." It is based upon the power supervisor's belief that this relaxation will not be abused, for the need of conservation is not past. "If extravagance or waste of 'juice' results, it will be necessary to withdraw the privilege now granted.

Restrictions are not removed, said the power supervisor, on present schedules of street lighting, on power consumption, or on domestic lighting. The order prohibiting power companies from taking on new burdens until the shortage is over is not revoked. The present order merely extends to the use of light for strictly business purposes.

It is made possible because, up to the present time, the communities involved have given such hearty, public-spirited support to the power saving program by keeping within the quotas assigned to them that the situation is well in hand, and there is no further necessity of imposing loss on business. There is now sufficient supply of 'juice' in sight to permit this exception to run until new steam-plant construction is completed in November to overcome the deficiency caused by the drop in Hydro-power.

"I wish to warn the public," said Mr. Butler, "that there are two contingencies under which the bars might have to be put up again. One is any reaction to the order of today that should lead to extravagance in the use of lighting current. The other is that some disaster might happen to one of the large steam plants. That would set us back right where we were in June, and the most rigid restriction would have to be imposed.

"This is the beginning of the end of the emergency which put me in charge of what threatened to be a bad situation, but it is not yet the end, and I hope everybody will realize that. We have managed so that agriculture and manufacturing industries have suffered a minimum of loss, and with good luck we shall come out of the emergency with no one very much harmed, and with a fine example of California resource and team spirit having been given to the world.

"With enterprises now under way that will soon greatly increase our supply of power, it looks as if we shall never again have a shortage requiring a repetition of this summer's rules."

Some time or other someone is going to get run over and killed, right in the business part of Newhall, by a car or truck going from thirty to fifty miles an hour. And the driver who happens to get arrested for the "accident" is going to be awfully surprised to find that the speed limit in town is only 15 miles an hour. And at this time we suggest that a "15 mile limit" sign be set up at each side of town on the boulevard.

Those political prophets who figure Nebraska for the democratic party may not know that the state is normally republican by thirty five thousand; that the factions of the republican party in that united this year as never before in a dozen years. The La-Follette vote will come from the element that bolted from the republican candidate for governor two years ago. They'll not vote for Bryan this time, however.

What California needs is a few less "booster" papers for impossible additions and inaccessible sites for inconvenient homes, and a few that will tell easterners the real truth about the state. They need to be told that work is no easier here than elsewhere; that the gold in the ground costs what it is worth; that everything is pretty much the same here as elsewhere.

EXCEPT the climate. They can be told that the bitter cold of winter, and the storms of winter and summer can be avoided. But the representation that the road to unalloyed happiness and untold wealth lies in the purchase of half an acre of land, or a tiny town lot only leads to disappointment, and disaster. If real estate agents were rigidly compelled to make good every statement they made in the sale of California real estate to uninformed easterners, the state would have a much better reputation east of the Rocky Mountains.

As part of a state-wide investigation of marketing agencies and of the California plan of Farm Bureau and Agricultural Extension organization, President Bradford of the American Farm Bureau Federation, together with E. P. Taylor and A. R. Simpson, also of the national organization officers, and state and county Farm Bureau officials, met at Santa Ana, September 6, at a conference at which the different functions of the Farm Bureau organization, both national, state and county, were discussed and their relationship to other agencies considered. Special consideration was given to organization and finance, the program of work, the farm home and publicity.

In addition, the national officers are making a special study of co-operative marketing agencies of the state, as well as the highly successful organization plan of the State Farm Bureau Federation and the effective Agricultural Extension organization which has attracted nation-wide attention.

When the fleet of highway patrol service trucks was inaugurated by the Automobile Club of Southern California to daily cover 2000 miles of main roads, it was not expected that the drivers would be called upon to rescue airplanes. This is what happened, however, a few days ago near Capistrano on the coast highway between Los Angeles and San Diego, where an airplane had been forced to land.

The driver of patrol car No 62 saw the plane make the forced landing, and having been a former member of the British air service, he realized that something was wrong. With his equipment for emergency repairs on motor vehicles and a knowledge of flying machines, he was able to not only speedily locate the trouble, but to effect temporary repairs. The grateful pilot of the airplane proceeded on his way with profuse thanks and great rejoicing.

SILVER POPLARS

By GRACE NOLL CROWELL

God wrote his loveliest poem on the day
He made the first tall silver poplar tree,
And set it high upon a pale-gold hill,
For all the new enchanted earth to see.

I think its beauty must have made him glad,
And that he smiled at it—and loved it so—
Then turned in sudden sheer delight, and made
A dozen silver poplars in a row!

Mist green and white against a turquoise sky,
A-shimmer and a-shine it stood at noon;
A misty silver loveliness at night,
Breathless beneath the first small wistful moon.

And then God took the music of the winds,
And set each leaf a-flutter and a-thrill—
Today I read his poem word by word
Among the silver poplars on the hill.

September 16—Hupmobile roadster, license No. 42-317, going north, left the highway on a sharp curve, about one mile above National Forest Inn and plunged forty feet into a canyon. One of the men riding in the car was seriously injured. He was picked up by a passing machine and taken to a Bakersfield hospital. The car was not badly damaged.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

Oh, I beg your pardon, I must have given you the wrong number.

Good sportsmen throughout Los Angeles County are co-operating with the Federal and County forestry officers to keep the "red plague" out of the mountains through a conscientious observation of recent restricting orders placed on hazardous areas. A careful patrol of closed territories by rangers and wardens has shown that but very few hunters have attempted to disobey the recent emergency regulations closing the County to hunting and camping.

To celebrate his 40th birthday a certain forest officer on the Ridge is said to have pulled off a "wild party" at the Inn, on the night of September 20. It is absolutely known that Mr. and Mrs. Joe Albert of Taft, came down to the Inn on the eventful night to try and keep the gang from busting all the new soup plates. The evening was spent in dancing and refreshments, mostly in refreshments, which included spring water, ginger ale, black coffee, etc. Preceding the function the forest officer was presented with several lovely and appropriate gifts. (He's glad the most useful present of all was NOT "tanglefoot.") We know one lady in that crowd who's cheating some man out of a good wife. And she's the one who cooked the chicken.

The Edison Company tower camp which has been maintained at National Forest Inn has been transferred to Long Beach. It's going to be pretty lonesome around here with the gang gone. Goodbye and good luck to every one of you.

Main Road Lacking in Allurement of Byway

Even before the automobiles took over the main roads it was better to walk in the byways. Along the lesser roads people are not too hurried for a friendly greeting as they pass, and the very animals of the back country are less sophisticated—the horses and cattle look up from their pasture to gaze with frank interest at each passerby. Then, coming from time to time across the quiet of the countryside, are sounds that men have always heard gladly—the far-off crowing, like a mellow bugle, of a barnyard king—the distant creak and rattle of a farmer's heavy wagon rolling on upon the hills.

But best of all are the moments of discovery; late afternoon, when the shadows are growing long, and the road, bending suddenly about a low hill facing toward the bay, comes out upon a wide view down a valley wooded with dark green pines—and then, beyond, a great stretch of fair water, deeply blue.

That is the allurements of the byways; quaintness is all about, and beauty lies in wait—perhaps around the next turning of the lane.—Collier's.

It appeared in the Moderate, of March 27, 1649, and ran: "Reader, thou art entreated to enquire after a blackish and kind of piebald nag, very poor, his face, feet and flank white, and a little white tip on his tall, wall eyes. He was stolen from grass from John Rotherham, of Barnot, in Hertfordshire. Whosoever will enquire, find him out, and bring or send tidings of him shall have what content they will for their pains."

Mint Canyon Juleps

A supposed murder mystery in Mint Canyon was the sensation last Friday, when the body of a man was found lying beside an auto, with his head almost blown off by a shot, evidently from a shotgun. The forest rangers made the discovery, the spot being on the edge of the national forest. Capt. Bright of Los Angeles and Judge Miller investigated, and reported that the man had evidently been killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun which was found in the car. Just how the accident happened is uncertain, but it was surmised that he had tossed the rifle, which was also found in the car, in such a manner as to cause the discharge of the shotgun. The dead man proved to be a Mr. Stone of Los Angeles. The accident apparently happened at least 24 hours before the discovery of the body.

NOT LONG ENOUGH TO FORGET

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(© 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Frances Meredith laid down her towel and sank down on the soft pine needles through which she had been working to make a hole deep enough to take the lower part of the stake which backed the small white sign. She sighed and looked wistfully down one of the stately corridors made by evenly planted rows of slender young pines.

"Like one of these very trees. Tall, straight, aspiring heavenward," she murmured. "That was John. Cut down in the strength of his youth. Oh, but life—and death—can be cruel."

And because it was warm and sweet there in the grove, she sat quietly on for many minutes and traced through from the beginning her romance, which had terminated like so many others on the battlefield in France.

John Stoddard and she had grown up together and drifted into love and wedding plans so naturally that neither one could have told when the other ceased to be only a friend. Nothing prevented an early marriage, for John was advancing rapidly in his chosen field of engineering, and Frances was both alone in the world and financially well provisioned. John, also, oddly enough, was without any relatives that mattered. That, Frances now sometimes thought, made his early death all the sadder. She alone could keep his memory green. If only she had married him before he went! But John had refused to let her take the chance of becoming a widow before she was fairly a wife, and she had tried to acquiesce as sensibly and cheerfully as possible.

So he had gone across, and for some months his letters had come regularly. Then had followed a dreadful silence to be broken only after weeks of suspense and agony by the telegram which told her he had passed away from the effects of a wound. She had made no effort to have him brought home, respecting what she felt would have been his wishes, but the longing was often heavy upon her. Just what form it should take did not occur to her until the circumstances arose which decided her to break up her home and go East.

An advertisement in a magazine caught her attention one evening, offering a splendid opportunity for a young woman to go into partnership with a not unknown landscape gardener, herself an older woman. It had appealed to Frances, who was beginning to wonder just how she would fill the years which seemed to stretch before her so empty.

A correspondence had followed, and when Frances wrote that she was coming that part would be ended. Tonight Frances planned to send that letter, which would suddenly uproot her from the existence she had always known.

And she was feeling the wrench of parting with the house in which she had been born, the little garden in which she had learned to walk, but most of all, the wonderful grove of pines set out by her father before his death. While her mother lived she had taken her daughter almost daily to trudge along the sweet-scented carpet and to gaze wonderingly at the blue sky patches far up through the tree tops. As she grew older Frances had loved to gather up her sewing or reading and run up to the hill where the grove began. It had come to symbolize for her much of that which she had missed—her parents' companionship and their affection. Then as her love for John blossomed, each separate tree seemed to signify to her his clean young manhood. This was more than ever true after his departure and failure to return.

And today she had come up to the grove to give expression to a desire which had come to her in the night. She had been wishing for a means to commemorate his memory. Suddenly the words of Charles Dickens had flashed through her mind: "Lord, keep my memory green." And with them had come the inspiration. She would dedicate her wonderful pine grove to his memory, instead of selling it as she had thought she must. No other memorial could possibly be more fitting.

In the morning she lost no time going down to the village and having the sign made up. "In memory of John Stoddard," it read, "Died in France." Then she came home, hunted up her trowel and climbed the hill. The sun was well past its zenith when Frances rose, brushed off her skirts of the clinging needles, and looked at her handwork. Yes, it was poignant in its simplicity and placed at the grove's edge would be read by all passing along the road. And the trees would continue their steady growth, increasing their strength and beauty.

Without looking back, Frances went slowly down the hill. She meant it to be her last visit to the grove before going East. Her thoughts, however, lingered in the fragrant spot she had just left, and absent-mindedly she went about numerous little errands in the village before taking the path that led home.

Dusk had fallen as she came up the box-bordered walk, and not until she had reached the very porch steps did she see that a figure was standing at her door, his back to her and something white under his arm.

"At the sound of her foot on the step he turned quickly, then grabbed her suddenly as she swayed and seemed about to fall.

"You didn't get my letter?" he said. "I was afraid the shock—" Frances was herself in a moment, but not her old, quiet remote self. Rather was she almost delirious with happiness. "No—no, John, I didn't. Unless this afternoon—but I was away. Oh, tell me, how—where—"

"Lost my memory in a hospital in France," said John briefly. "And there was a mix-up in names—and, oh, darling, the long explanations will keep. What worried me was whether I would find you married. Three years is a long time."

"Not long enough to forget, John. Did you really think—"

John picked up that which had fallen from under his arm unnoticed to the veranda floor. "Not when I passed along the Grove road and read this," he said tenderly. "In memory of—well, darling, I picked it up and brought it along!"

A Desirable Government

WHAT HOPE is there for disabled soldiers, cripples, infirm in body and mind when the new order is established on earth? WHAT PROPHET says that all the people will have good health? WHAT does the Bible say will be the lot of those who now live in tenements in poverty? These and many other questions that trouble us are answered in a book called "A Desirable Government" which can be had for 10c.
